“ I remember our Saturday afternoons at Bolc's bar. Billy and me usually showed up around 4pm and Uncle Richie would be in his usual seat towards the back of the bar with his beer and his glass of ice. Sometimes we could hear his laugh before we even got inside. Uncle Richie had an infectious personality and you couldn't help but to like him instantly. He always had a story which usually left us in tears laughing. We would spend hours drinking and talking and laughing even though it never felt that long. I will always remember those times. Uncle Rich, you are gone too soon but will always be remembered with a laugh because I think that is how you would want it. Your friend Bert.
